Bottlebooks is an innovative start-up in the wine, beer and spirits business. We're opening up an engineering office in Porto and we're looking for an inspired and motivated UI/UX Designer to be part of the core team of this new location. In this position, you will work on our leading cloud-based information exchange platform. We are a small, hard working, fast moving and flexible startup team.

At Bottlebooks, you will...

- be a core member of our team
- work closely with our CTO and all members of the Bottlebooks team from the CEO to Customer Support
- work closely with our customers to identify and solve user problems
- create and prototype new and improved products that are usable and sticky
- create cohesive product experiences
- gain deep experience in the international wine industry

You will be a great fit, if you...

- design products that customers use and love
- love to solve complex problems
- are flexible, finding a fast moving team exciting
- enjoy interacting with our customers
- are a self-starter that takes ownership of problems

Core skills you need to have...

- Good Core UX/UI Skills (Usability Testing, Wireframing, Research, Interaction)
- Knowledge of Design and Wireframing tools
- Experience with web, mobile and responsive
- 3+ years of professional experience
- Able to communicate clearly in English

Nice to have skills...

- HTML5, CSS, Javascript
- Familiarity with SCRUM
- Knowledge and interest in wine, beer and spirits
- Fluency in other languages

Bottlebooks is...

a standard way for wine, beer and spirits businesses to exchange product information. It replaces tedious email and Excel forms with a single tool that producers and their business partners can use to organize, manage, and collaborate on professional information. Bottlebooks is available in 7 languages and is used by 4500 businesses in 42 countries. www.bottlebooks.me
